

Alliance for Workers' Liberty presents...

New Unionism: How workers can fight back

A dayschool to discuss struggles past and present

In the late 1880s, workers (often unskilled or semi-skilled, often migrants and often working in casualised and precarious environments) organised militant industrial unions to fight back against their bosses. After 40 years of limited struggles, partial gains and setbacks, this movement put working-class power back on the political agenda.

Faced with increasingly similar conditions today, can we build a New Unionism for the 21st century that transforms and revolutionises the modern labour movement?

Speakers/sessions include:

- Louise Raw, author of "Striking A Light", on the Bryant & May match women's strike of 1888;
- Colin Waugh (Editorial Board "Post-16 Educator" and author of a pamphlet on the Plebs League) on independent working-class education;
- The role of Marxists and Marxist ideas;
- New Unionism 2012: organising the unorganised;
- "The Troublemakers' Handbook": reading Labor Notes' guide to organising at work;
- Women workers in New Unionism

Sat 18 Feb 2012 11.30am - 5.30pm
Highgate Newtown Community Centre,
Bertram St, London N19 5DQ (Archway tube)

for info: 020 7394 8923 or awl@workersliberty.org
and to register & pay (tickets: £10/6/4) visit:
www.workersliberty.org/newunionism

Alliance for Workers' Liberty presents...

New Unionism: How workers can fight back

A dayschool to discuss struggles past and present

In the late 1880s, workers (often unskilled or semi-skilled, often migrants and often working in casualised and precarious environments) organised militant industrial unions to fight back against their bosses. After 40 years of limited struggles, partial gains and setbacks, this movement put working-class power back on the political agenda.

Faced with increasingly similar conditions today, can we build a New Unionism for the 21st century that transforms and revolutionises the modern labour movement?

Speakers/sessions include:

- Louise Raw, author of "Striking A Light", on the Bryant & May match women's strike of 1888;
- Colin Waugh (Editorial Board "Post-16 Educator" and author of a pamphlet on the Plebs League) on independent working-class education;
- The role of Marxists and Marxist ideas;
- New Unionism 2012: organising the unorganised;
- "The Troublemakers' Handbook": reading Labor Notes' guide to organising at work;
- Women workers in New Unionism

Sat 18 Feb 2012 11.30am - 5.30pm
Highgate Newtown Community Centre,
Bertram St, London N19 5DQ (Archway tube)

for info: 020 7394 8923 or awl@workersliberty.org
and to register & pay (tickets: £10/6/4) visit:
www.workersliberty.org/newunionism